Miscellaneous Paragraphs

Some of the [illegible] papers are printed on wall paper—which is [illegible] of their treasonable balderdash.

[illegible] have presented a petition to the Pope of Rome praying him to surrender his temporal rule over the States of the Church in Italy.

The arrest [illegible] of Gen McClellan's staff has been much talked of of late. The fact is, they were [illegible] to rejoin the army instead of following their former General.

Young [illegible], who was made a Christian without his own consent by being baptized in infancy, has been reconciled to the Church, and has taken minor ecclesiastical orders.

The rebel females in Nashville, Tennessee, make a practice of jerking their dresses when they pass Union soldiers. It is noticed that none but those who have pretty ankles practice this jerk.

Gen. Grant has issued orders to place the cotton taken, into the hands of the Government agents to be sold, for the benefit of the Treasury. Grant is always right, but he don't understand strategy.

Gen. Rosekrans has determined to send all paroled Union soldiers home, who surrender without fighting, after exhibiting them with night caps on at dress parade. He had better make that order for officers, not men.

"This is one of the great days of the world," says Gen. Hooker to the intrepid Berry, as he rode by on the morning of the battle of Antietam. "The Southern rebellion lies coiled up in that valley, and it should be to night in our power."

The publication of a new advertising paper in San Francisco, which is strictly religious in its tone, has attracted our attention. It is given away, and advertisements are inserted at low rates. San Francisco has several ably conducted religious journals, with which this paper comes in ruinous competition. The whole thing looks like a rat advertising dodge, the more particularly as the selections are miserable, and there is not a "stickfull" of original matter in it. We hope those who desire a religious paper will take those that are published legitimately and not allow a lot of trash to be circulated with the professed object of advancing religion, but the real intent of putting money in somebody's pocket and ratting the business of publishing. As a rule, papers that are given away are not worthy to be read.

SWORD PRESENTATIONS.—The practice of presenting swords to carpet knights, fancy Brigadiers, who have had the accolade laid on while yet they were innocent of blood-letting, has become so ridiculous that we begin to look for a big skedaddle whenever we hear of our troops being led by one of these swords men. The fact is that two thirds of these fine portly gentlemen have no more use for a sword, than a frog has for a tail, being innocent of the science of fencing they are much more likely to cut themselves than an antagonist if they attempt to wave their trenchant weapons. So far as we can learn, a certain amount of ponderosity is necessary to entitle gentlemen to command in the field. No doubt this is very proper in heavy infantry, but we insist that when the vital forces congregate in the stomach that a man is more dangerous to victuals than he is to the enemies of his country. It is surprising that a man of such formidable fighting characteristics as Old Abe—and he has them, notwithstanding the speeches about his cautiousness—should appoint these large tun bellied old fellows to important commands when he knows the importance of youth lightness and agility. The personal prowess of the leader inspires the common soldier as much to day as at any former period. If there are any more sword presentations we must insist on the recipients giving bonds that they will not hurt themselves with the weapons intended for the destruction of our enemies.

DEATH OF CASTELLANE.—The oldest of Napoleon's marshals has gone the way of all the earth. Marshal Castellane, who commanded at Lyons, was carried to the grave by twenty four non-commissioned officers, all of whom had obtained the Legion of Honor or military medals. The Marshal had been fifty eight years a soldier, and seen more war perhaps than any man of his time. He in his will made a very singular request, showing that the ruling passion was strong even in death. It was that the first private grenadier, and the first private dragoon in the garrison of Lyons, dying after him may be buried side by side with him in his own vault. It is a rare thing in France to find a private rising against an officer, but sometime ago while at a review, a murderous shot was fired at the Marshal from a regiment of Voltigeurs. He heard the whistling of the ball near his head and on taking off his cap found that it had lodged in it. Without saying a word to his staff he galloped in to the front of the regiment from which the shot proceeded, and cried out that if he knew the cowardly dog who was such a bad shot he would certainly give him a week in the guard house. Then, turning to his staff, he said, "what do you think of this?" a fellow [illegible] possesses his man at thirty yards [illegible] ought to be [illegible]. The Marshal was [illegible] any inquiry to be made [illegible] his attempt upon his life, but he resented it [illegible] the whole [illegible]. In [illegible] Marshal de Castellane the most [illegible] marshal of France is now [illegible].

TUESDAY MORNING DEC 30 1862

Military Designs of the Confederates

The Confederates appear to have abandoned the idea of defending Arkansas by regular forces and will depend on the guerilla system to distract the Unionists and take care of that section During the month of November Gen Holmes commanding the trans Mississippi department of the Confederacy, issued orders for the concentration of the army in Arkansas with a view to its removal east of the Mississippi to re inforce P[illegible] and Bragg This is to provide against the possible capture of Vicksburg, which is to be captured by the Unionists at all hazards If it falls the Confederates will have their troops to add to the armies operating in Tennessee while if they were left west of the river they would be liable to be hunted down by overwhelming forces, and could receive no [illegible] In short, the rebels have abandoned [illegible] pearance, the west side of the Mississippi to take care of itself, if they do not successfully defend Vicksburg

Failing in this they will hold East Tennessee, the southern part of Mississippi and the territory to the east Having possession of a road leading from Tennessee to Richmond they are in a position to concentrate all their forces either in Virginia or East Tennessee and northern Georgia and Alabama when they are reduced entirely to the defensive Something remarkable in the history of war here occurs; the State of Texas has about sixty thousand men engaged in this war, all of whom will be cut off from home by the opening of the Mississippi In the meantime the Union element in Texas is probably a majority of the people of that State If the heart of old Sam Houston is not deadened by age, we may expect to hear of him yet in the last and most glorious phase of his eventful life—as the leader of the Unionists in that State which he made with his own hands, which was led into the Union by him—and which rebelled in spite of his urgent protestations to the contrary

If the Confederates can defend the line of the Rappahannock, they will probably be satisfied for the present By so doing they will engage the attention of more than an equal number of Union forces opposed to them — There are strong symptoms of an intention on their part to attack Nashville. Their out posts were only eleven miles southeast of that place, on the Murfreesboro' road, at the latest accounts All their available forces in the West may be concentrated for this purpose and they may suddenly take the offensive with a view to carry the war into Kentucky again If Gen Rosekrans resembled Gen Buel, we might have fears of a catastrophe resulting from these movements, but happily Corinth is too fresh in our memories, to have any apprehensions

To counteract this eastward movement of the enemy, the army of the southwest is under orders to join the forces in Tennessee except a corps of observation which will remain at Rolla in Missouri Gen McClernand's expedition has dropped down the Mississippi, but its movements are kept entirely secret

THE BATTLE AT CORINTH —The official report of the battle of the 4th of October, at Corinth, was written on the 28th of October, and has just found its way to this coast by mail The results are far more important than were at first reported, and constitute a full offset to the battle at Fredericksburg The Union forces found 1,423 dead rebels officers and men, on the field By calculation their wounded is 5,692 They left 2 248 prisoners in our hands, representing 53 regiments of cavalry 13 batteries of artillery and 7 battalions, making 69 regiments, 7 battalions, and 13 batteries, beside separate companies—in all 38 000 men, or double our force engaged We took also fourteen stand of colors, two pieces of artillery, 3 300 stand of arms, 4 500 rounds of ammunition and a large lot of accoutrements The enemy blew up several wagons between Corinth and Chewalla and beyond Chewalla many ammunition wagons and carriages were destroyed, and the ground was strewn with tents, officer s mess chests, and small arms We pursued them forty miles in force and sixty miles with cavalry Our loss was only 315 killed, 1 812 wounded and 282 prisoners and missing

THE ANCIENT PUBLIC FUNCTIONARY —The Sacramento Bee says that ex President Buchanan has closed the controversy with General Scott, and in doing so calls God to witness the sincerity of all his administrative acts, and relies on posterity to judge him justly The old wretch has been judged by his cotemporary compeers and his name consigned to more than Arnold's infamy He would like to appeal from this decision Having been adjudged found guilty and condemned, he would no doubt like a new trial or change of venue Let him have so many trials as he may—in each case the verdict will be through all coming generations He was an ingrate, imbecile and cowardly traitor

THE RESPONSIBILITY —It is now pretty well established that Gen Halleck ordered Gen Sumner to remain at Falmouth on the north side of the Rappahannock when that general wished to cross and carry the heights beyond Fredericksburg at once His orders to Gen Burnside were not only peremptory in regard to making the attack, but he even details the manner in which the army should be maneuvred During Gen Halleck's command in the western department, he achieved a high reputation as a strategist but he was not so ready in risking a battle at Corinth, where the rebellion might have been smothered as he was at Fredericksburg If he had seen the enemy's fortifications on the Rappahannock, the loss of ten thousand men might have been avoided

STEALING AT VANCOUVER —The citizens of Vancouver have been much troubled lately by a gang of thieves of the clothes line order Not an article of clothing can be put out to dry without the chances being in favor of its being stolen Private houses have been entered and robbed of articles of the kind named In one case a feather bed had been stolen, and was found on the river bank below town No owner has yet come forward to claim it A correspondent at Vancouver thinks that the publication of the fact that thieves are prowling about will tend to prevent depredations It may do so but fowling pieces and buck shot are the most effectual remedies

VANCOUVER LITERARY CLUB —The Literary Club at Vancouver, which was organized by the soldiers of the Washington Territory Volunteers and others connected with the military service was addressed on the evening of the 27th of December by the Rev Mr Raynor of Vancouver His subject was—"George Washington and Martin Luther the great Originators of Thought and Action "—which was ably handled A committee of the club waited on Mr Raynor after the meeting closed and tendered him the thanks and compliments of the society for the instruction and entertainment afforded

The Daily Oregonian.

CITY.

The MORNING OREGONIAN has a larger SUBSCRIPTION LIST than any other Daily published in this City.

[illegible] —The [illegible] between the plank and gravel [illegible] factions, in the matter of street improvements is waxing funny. There has always been a large party of citizens who believed that each American sovereign property holder had a right to make just such a pavement in front of his premises as suited his humor or convenience. From this arises the elegant variety of pavements which is the marked peculiarity of this city. Thus, one end of the street is plank and the other gravel and stone—the latter is usually about one foot lower than the other, and at the street crossings we find convenient embankments which hold the water and make the gravel and stone sections lake lots of slush which emits an aroma stronger than it is agreeable. It also affords a good opportunity for the owners of the plank sections to dispose of their mud by simply shoving it over on to the gravel and stone pavements.—In the course of time, the slush must over the street crossings and then it will flow off to somewhere. In the meantime it may be heaped up each morning to be melted down by the dew that is sure to fall the next night. The heaping up process suggests the question whether the mud might not be entirely removed for the expense of heaping it up three or four times? We leave the subject for interested parties to cipher on without ever imagining that there will be any unity of purpose either in improving or cleaning streets, but as a problem for the curious and the arithmetically inclined.

CONFINED.—Patrick Kearney is addicted to drinking. The way of it is this: Patrick will be weary from labor and will take some glasses of liquor, his mind to compose it, and then gets drunk before he knows it. Patrick is one of those men who believe that coming events cast their shadows before. Witness the proof: on Saturday evening, being then intoxicated, he met his Honor, the Recorder, and with a prescience that is only attributable to the spirit of prophecy, protested that he ought not to be put in jail. "You wouldn't spoil a fellow's New Year's spree would you?" says this bold namesake of the gallant Phil. On coming down on Monday morning, however, the first thing the Recorder saw was the lugubrious countenance of Patrick Kearney, who at once plead guilty to the charge of drunkenness, and was sent up for three days in default of paying $5 and costs. It is thus the stray sheep are being gathered in before the New Year comes in.

ANONYMOUS CORRESPONDENTS.—A number of anonymous communications have lately been sent to this office; some of which are meritorious and others again, are entirely unworthy of notice. No contribution, upon any subject whatever, will appear in the Oregonian, unless the author is known to us, or his identity and signature are vouched for by responsible parties. No captions or unnecessarily personal articles will receive any consideration under any circumstances. If any article having these objectionable features is hereafter sent anonymously to this office, and the writer becomes known to us, we shall take such measures as will prevent the party from again indulging in such an impropriety. The author of the article signed "Immigrant" is informed that his contribution is considered valuable, and he can have a hearing by making himself known to us—not otherwise.

MASONIC PRESENTATION.—After the conclusion of the installation ceremonies at Harmony Lodge No. 12, F. & A. M., on Saturday night last, P. M. John McCraken was presented with the jewels of a Past Master by members of the Lodge. Mr. McCraken had been Master of Harmony Lodge for three years, and in retiring received the present mentioned as a token of the appreciation of his services in that position.

TURKEYS.—A drove of about seventy five turkeys passed through the streets yesterday morning, attracting much attention. They were driven from Polk county and are designed for consumption on New Year's day. Several eager-looking persons, were very anxious to find where they would roost to night, looking all the while as if they had no objection to gobbling down a gobbler or two on the festive occasion coming, if not sooner.

SALE AT AUCTION.—A. B. Richardson will hold an extensive sale of Silks, Furs, Fancy goods and China ware at his Auction house on the corner of Oak and Front streets this morning at 10 o'clock. We notice particularly the China ware, which comprises toilet ware, vases, &c., all richly gilt and very desirable for holiday presents. At the same time there will be sold an elegant 6¾ octave rosewood piano, with solid iron frame.

GOLD ARRIVAL.—Wells, Fargo & Co brought down on the Hunt last night one hundred and twenty five pounds of gold dust. It came through from Lewiston.

TRI WEEKLY.—We are informed that the O. S. N. Co's steamers will make tri weekly trips from here to the Dalles until business brightens.

FAVOR.—Harper's New Monthly for December has been laid on our table by Barrett of the News Depot and Book Emporium. The illustrated article is by Ross Browne, and is about the salt mines of Cracow. The several romances are continued, and the usual amount of original miscellany.

A Thousand Years.

BY BAYARD TAYLOR.

[On the 20th of September, 1862, there was a grand convocation of all the notables of the Russian empire at Novgorod, to celebrate the thousandth anniversary of the Russian national existence. Novgorod is the religious capital of Russia, and is looked upon with the same reverence that the Mussulman looks on Mecca. The poem below particularly notices the emancipation of the serfs, which was to be declared on that day [illegible]]

A thousand years' through storm and fire,
With varying fate, the work has grown,
Till Alexander crowns the spire
Where Rurik laid the corner stone.

The chieftain's sword, that could not rust
But bright in constant battle grew,
Raised to the world a throne august,
A nation grander than he knew.

Nor he alone: but those who have,
Through faith or deed, an equal part,—
The subtle brain of Yaroslav,
Vladimir's arm, and Nikon's heart.

The later hands that built so well
The work sublime which these began,
And up from base to pinnacle
Wrought out the Empire's mighty plan.

All these, to-day, are crowned anew,
And rule in splendor where they trod,
While Russia's children throng to view
Her holy cradle, Novgorod,

From Volga's banks, from Dwina's side;
From pine-clad Ural, dark and long;
Or where the foaming Terek's tide
Leaps down from Kasbek, bright with song!

From Altai's chain of mountain-cones,
Mongolian deserts, far and free,
And lands that bind, through changing zones,
The Eastern and the Western sea.

To every race she gives a home,
And creeds and laws enjoy her shade;
Till, far beyond the dreams of Rome,
Her Cæsar's mandate is obeyed.

She blends the virtues they impart,
And holds, within her life combined
The patient faith of Asia's heart,
The force of Europe's restless mind.

She bids the nomad's wandering cease,
She binds the wild marauder fast,
Her plow-shares turn to homes of peace
The battle-field of ages past.

And, nobler far, she dares to know
Her future's task—nor knocks in vain,
But strikes at once the generous blow
That makes her millions men again!

So, farmer-based, her power expands,
Nor yet has seen its crowning hour,
Still teaching to the struggling lands
That Peace the offspring is of Power.

Build up the storied bronze, to tell
The steps whereby this night she trod,
The thousand years that chronicle
The toil of man, the help of God!

And may the thousand years to come—
The future ages, wise and free—
Still see her flag, and hear her drum,
Across the world, from sea to sea!—

Still find, a symbol, stern and grand,
Her ancient eagle's strength unshorn,
One head to watch the western land,
And one to guard the land of morn!

Novgorod, Russia, Sept. 20, 1862.

Onions in a Hygienic Point of View.

In a medical point of view, the garden onion is of more importance than any other of our esculent vegetables. It is a powerful diuretic, and is said as such to have been successfully used as a specific in dropsy, gout, gravel, lumbago, and generally in all affections of the kidneys and urinary organs. As an instance of its efficacy in dropsy, we shall relate a circumstance which came under our own observation a few years since. We were traveling through one of the middle departments of France in company with a very eminent counsellor, and member of the Parisian Bar, who had turned his attention to discovering the various medicinal properties of simples, in illustration of a favorite theory of his, that all the ailments which afflict mankind may be removed by remedies from the vegetable kingdom, to the utter exclusion of all mineral substances.

One day we stopped and claimed the privileges of hospitality at a beautiful "chateau" belonging to a distant relative of our friend. We were most kindly received by the lord of the mansion, a fine looking middle aged man, who, with tears in his eyes, informed us that his lady, whom our friend described as a most gentle, kind-hearted, and noble-minded dame, was dying of the dropsy, all the medical men in the neighborhood having stated that nothing more could be done for her. "That remains to be seen," said our friend hastily, "I must see her forthwith," and he proceeded to her bed-room, dragging us with him—a circumstance which will create no surprise in those acquainted with the manners of the French. The lady was alarmingly ill, and had swollen to an enormous size; she had been tapped once before, but on the present occasion had obstinately refused such a mode of relief. The Parisian lawyer, nothing daunted, called for some white onions.—Having peeled a sufficient quantity, he filled with them a pipkin, or coarse earthen mug, holding about three pints. Having stuffed in as many peeled onions as the vessel would contain, he filled this with cold water, covered it, and set it in the midst of the warm embers, where the water would simmer with very little ebullition. He let the onions stew until they were reduced to a pap, and the water to half the original quantity—a process which required three or four hours, as the vessel was kept closely covered, and the fire slow. He strained the liquor through a linen bag, carefully expressing every drop of juice from the onion pulp which had melted in the liquor.—Having extracted this latter, he carefully weighed it, and then, gently over the fire, but without boiling, dissolved in it its own weight of coarse brown sugar. Of this syrup he gave his patient two table-spoonfuls every two hours, a fresh quantity being made so as to keep up a constant supply. In a day or two the lady felt better, and in about six weeks, during which time we remained at the chateau as guests, she was able to walk with us about the grounds.—We had occasion to visit our kind host about six months after our former visit, and found his lady enjoying excellent health, and valuing her cousin's onion syrup as a specific for all the complaints "that flesh is heir to."
—Mag. Domestic Economy, (Eng.)

CHERRY KITCHEN.—A writer in the Country Gentleman puts in a plea for the kitchen:—

"Very much is written and said about pleasant and tastefully furnished parlors, but the kitchen is left quite in the background, except as it is described in stories of the olden time, "with ponderous beams over head, from which hung festoons of dried pumpkins, apples, &c." It is too important a part of home to be neglected, yet it surely is neglected. The parlor must be cool and airy; and sunshiny, but the kitchen may be wherever there is room for it, with a view, from curtainless windows, of barnyard and woodpile—no paint nor carpet on the floor, no paper on the walls—furnished with chairs and tables, and also with clothes frames and wash tubs, a line of dish towels over the stove, and a row of old hats, coats and frocks for ornaments.—This is a picture of too many of our farmers' kitchens—of the place where we housekeepers expect to spend a considerable portion of our time. No wonder mothers look careworn, and farmers' wives and daughters complain of their field of labor. No wonder that soiled morning dresses are seen; for clean calico, white collars, and smooth hair, could never feel at home in a dingy, cheerless kitchen, and the man who will not provide a pleasant one, deserves to take his breakfast every morning opposite a slovenly-looking wife."

Variety.

He who goes through a land and scatters blown roses, may be tracked next day by the withered petals that strew the ground; but he who goes through it and scatters rose seed, a hundred years after leaves behind him a land full of fragrance and beauty for his monuments, and as a heritage for his sons and daughters.

"Papa, can't I go to the zoological rooms to see the camomile fight the rynosir-ceboss?" "Sartin, my son, but don't get your trowsers torn." Strange, my dear, what a taste that boy has for nat'ral history. No longer ago than yesterday he had eight tom cats hanging by their tails to the clothes line."

General O——, formerly mayor of our city, is a great wit. Not long since one of his daughters was married to a man by the name of Battles. On this occasion the General was sparkling and brilliant. After the ceremony was concluded, he made some remarks; and turning to the bride, he said, "that he had always tried to do by her the best he knew how, and that for years he had stood forward as her champion; but he thought proper to state that he was now done; and he gave her fair warning that henceforth she must fight her own 'BATTLES.'

The distinction between liking and loving was well made by a little girl six years old. She was eating something at breakfast that she seemed to relish very much.

"Do you love it?" asked her aunt.

"No," replied the child with a look of disgust, "I like it. If I loved it I should kiss it."

When you hear a woman exclaim, "oh, what a fool I was to reject so many lovers, and then take up with what I did!" be assured she married the first man who made her an offer, doing more than half the courting herself; and that many a time her henpecked husband has wished she had rejected him!

SOLVENT FOR OLD PUTTY AND PAINT.—Soft soap mixed with solution of potash or caustic soda; or pearlash and slaked lime mixed with sufficient water to form a paste. Either of these laid on with an old brush or rag, and left for some hours, will render it easily removable.
